Thanks, Mary Laura! I spoke with my contact who indicated a couple of leading states, but there are also factors to consider – universal vs. non-universal, size of program, etc. I am familiar with NIEER's report but they evaluate states on other stats that do not include kindergarten readiness rates or children's performance. I'll work on pulling together information and get it to you asap. Would Wednesday close of business work?

Thanks!
Melinda

Mary Laura,
Be careful what you ask for you just might get it and more.... Here is another bit of info, not specifically to PreK but does provide information by state. The National Center for Children in Poverty published Early Childhood State Policy Profiles. For more information on the Center please see their website here.
Feel free to say TMI!
