Hi Sara,

Thanks for reaching out. Unfortunately, this Wednesday is my last day with the Department of Education. I'm not sure who will serve in my role for the interim; however, I'm going to let our Teacher Liaison reach out to you and work with you to see how the Department and your organization can work together on this.

Regards,

Hue T. Reynolds

Hi Hue:

I'm so sorry for the delay in getting back to you. I would love to connect on this if you are still interested. How does your Wed, Thursday or Friday look?

Hi Sara - would love to chat with you on this initiative. Do you have time later this week or next week?

Thanks Ginny for the virtual intro.

Dear Hue,

I'd like to "virtually" introduce you to Sara Hall who is the Director at The Center for Secondary Schools Digital Learning & Policy at the Alliance for Excellent Education. Sara is currently working to put together the first-ever "Digital Learning Day" on February 1, 2012. The Digital Learning Day campaign is the flagship project of the Center and will highlight a broad array of instructional strategies and approaches that use technology, including blended and online learning, formative assessment for personalized instruction, school improvement data, relevant and consistent continuing education for teachers, promotion of science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) and innovation, as well as broadband access for all. The Pearson Foundation is a supporting sponsor for this new initiative.

Eighteen states have already signed onto the campaign and will be participating on February 1st. To see a list of the ones participating, you can go here: <http://www.digitalllearningday.org/awards/>. There is a state toolkit site where you can view resources and get ideas on how to participate: <http://www.digitalllearningday.org/toolkits/toolkitsstate-toolkits>.

I told Sara that I would put you in touch with her as they would love to have Florida participate since it is on the forefront of digital learning.
